TECHO, a major European producer and supplier of office furniture, is organising the conference Techocon 2018. The main theme is the Workplace of the Future and this year it will focus on new methods of working, and the sharing of information and workplaces: coworking.

The Workplace of the Future will be fundamentally different. Companies and people will change their working habits, the structures and organisation of work teams will change, as will the layout of office space. By the end of 2018 1.7 million people around the world will work in coworking environments at 19,000 workplaces.

The main speakers and contributors at TechoCon 2018 will be architects, designers, and people directly creating and using office space. We will also invite specialists working in associated fields: psychology, behavioural research, and analysts dealing with spatial arrangement and human behaviour. The conference is accompanied by a weekly blog with news from this branch.
